Maya is a 19th century Sri Lankan Manor House set in two acres of garden. The architecture draws influences from both Dutch and British colonial styles, and the renovation blends original period features and a more contemporary style – high ceilings, open views, sleek lines and an emphasis on comfort. There are five suites, each opening onto the house's L shaped pool. My pick would be Kohomba, with its covered courtyard, extending directly to its own private garden, but Khumbuk also looks attractive with its four poster bed.
